

This is a painting by an artist named Luigi Lucioni. He liked to paint the farms and trees of Vermont. His birch trees show white branches and colorful leaves.

Luigi Lucioni, Farewell to the Birches, 1985

"I finished it August 1st, 1985 after nearly four years and I truly believe it's the best landscape that I painted." -LL

Did you know that SVAC has over 30 paintings by Luigi Lucioni? They are kept in a special place meant for storing art, but we bring them out on put them on display in the gallery from time to time. We hope to share some with you soon.

Your landscape can use any colors you imagine. What would your world look like?
